Precious Metals In Your IRA

Planning for one's retirement is a serious undertaking that entails making investment decisions for the long term. Given the uncertainty associated with long range financial planning, investment advisors routinely urge individuals to diversify the investments in their retirement portfolios by including a variety of investment products. Because gold, silver, platinum and palladium counterbalance the market volatility associated with a portfolio containing stocks and bonds alone, precious metals serve as excellent means by which to diversify one's retirement investments. In fact, when the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 became law, the United States Congress and the President authorized Americans to include precious metals bullion coins and bars in their IRAs.
